Trustees To View Urschel Pond Plan

The possibility that Urschel Pond may be put into use this semester appeared more likely Monday night when Sen. Casey Hageman reported to the Senate that the matter will go to the Board of Trustees next week.

This past week the pond has again been explored for underwater obstacles and jagged rocks by swimming coach Sam Cooper's crew.

If the pond is not available for this semester, it will probably be ready for summer school students, according to Coach Cooper's supplemental report to Dr. Prout.

Senate tabled a motion upon a recommendation of the Elections Rules Committee that the preferential ballot be dropped here, and that the Elections Committee assume judicial responsibility to determine if an infraction of election rules occurs and pass judgement on the affair.

Included in this motion were provisions to add to the candidate petitions the deadline date for the petitions, inform dorms and houses far enough in advance to prepare candidates and, to open active campaigning 50 hours prior to the opening of the polls on election day.

The motion was tabled following a general discussion concerning the Elections Rules Committee's authority to assume judicial power. As the recommendations were put into a blanket motion, all had to pass to put into effect any one of them.

A main point of contention raised in the matter was whether all matters of judgement concerning violations of election rules should be referred to the Student Court, the Senate, or the Elections Committee.

Banquet Planned For Journalists Next Wednesday

For outstanding work on student publications journalism students will be honored at the Publications Banquet to be held May 24 at the Commons.

Students who have achieved recognition for their work on the BEE GEE NEWS, the KEY, the Freshman Handbook, or the Student Directory have been invited.

An annual affair, the banquet is sponsored by the Publications Committee.

Banquet invitations were sent Tuesday to 130 students, faculty, and guests, according to Jesse J. Currier, chairman of the journalism dept. Pres. Frank J. Prout, and Dean Arch B. Conklin.

Any person eligible for membership in the Society is nominated for membership by a committee. During the 12th week of the second semester the candidates for membership are put up to election.

Office Reveals Job Openings

The Student Employment Office urges all students interested in part-time or full-time positions to stop in at the office, 201A, during the week, especially on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

Along with the warmer weather have come many job openings, such as housework, babysitting, yard work, and heavy duty housework for men. There are also openings for full-time jobs, such as stenographers.

Students are asked to stop in at the office or call 2634 because of the difficulty in reaching those who are interested in work.

Group Plans Pavilion

By DON TINDALL

An Outdoor Dance Pavilion is the final goal of the Varsity Club in one of the most ambitious projects ever undertaken on BG's campus.

The field east of Urschel Quarry will be the site of an outdoor concrete dance floor, refreshment stand, and tables and benches, according to Bob Frary, president of the Varsity Club. Work will begin regardless of the final decision regarding the fitness of the quarry for swimming.

Varsity Club members will do the excavating and other labor involved in the construction of the dance floor, but the material will cost approximately $600. The area immediately along the east bank of the quarry, including that around the large fireplace, will also be cleaned up from its present unkept condition in the hopes that the grass and shrubs will grow to help present a neater appearance.

What is now a small wooden building out by North Dorm will be moved to the site of the pavilion and placed near the south side of the dance floor. After repairing and painting by the Varsity Club members, this building will house the refreshment and soft drink stand, and also the PA system which will provide the music for dancing.

The dance floor will be located on the south side of the field, which will be entirely fenced in, leaving one main gate at the northwest corner. Light will be furnished by the addition of another large floodlight similar to the two already in use. Tables and chairs will be placed around the dance floor, and park-type benches will be located along the bank of the quarry.

According to President Frary, the period when the dance pavilion will be open will be about 12 weeks long; six weeks before summer school and six weeks after, with variations of course depending on the weather.

Pledge Week Hits Bee Gee Campus

By GENE DENT

The Greeks of the social fraternities and sororities have donned their white togas, pinned on their glittering badges, and have launched forth on their annual campaign of terror.

In the next few days many a pledge will be seen wandering aimlessly about the campus with a vacant stare in his blood shot eyes.

One interesting little phase to pledge week involves telephone duty. Each despicable pledge is stationed by the telephone stand, and when that instrument rings he grabs it up in the best classic Greek tradition and then bursts out with a flow of ritual language that is vaguely reminiscent of Homer's Iliad.

Upon first impression the caller may think he is talking to Diomedes Praxteles or Ajax Telemachus, but eventually, after a few long moments of finger drumming and cigarette chewing, the caller discovers, quite by accident, that he has 'phoned the right house.

Each Greek society varies its dialogue and if one makes enough calls he may learn to differentiate between organizations. This helps simplify the complex problems of contacting someone in a hurry, and it also saves some wear and tear on the telephone book. The only difficulty remaining is how to get around the ritual. One suggestion might be to send a telegram, or better yet, not call at all. Possibly a quick course in Greek might help.

However, no hope seems in sight until the Greeks fold up their togas, pack them neatly away, and finally consent to the awarding of the coveted button. Then serenity shall return and we will be safe for another brief period of time. All Hail Homer, All Hail Plato, All Hail.

"I THINK WE USED TOO BRIGHT A BULB ON THAT ONE MR. TIMPKINS."

Why Wait . . .

With the closing of this week's Senate, except for a short business meeting following the banquet next week, this year's term has been completed and yet nothing has been done to insure the student body of a two semester Senate president.

Last week President-elect Louis Daigneau stated he was going to include in his program next year a plan he had worked out for dealing with the problem of mid-term presidential change.

Mr. Daigneau was appointed at the beginning of this semester as chairman of the constitutional committee, under whose jurisdiction a matter such as this would fall, and yet he did not initiate any action to rule out the changing of Senate leadership at mid-year.

We are wondering at this time why Mr. Daigneau did not bring forth his plan earlier in the semester when action could have been taken on it. We appreciate and are hopeful upon hearing of the new president's enterprise in already looking to his duties of next year, but the reason for not divulging his plan earlier this year is still unanswered for us.

Toledo Again . . .

An interesting little item appeared in the Toledo Times Wednesday stating the Toledo University's tennis team graciously eased up against Bowling Green Tuesday to let the Falcons win a doubles match.

We will admit that the Orange and Brown netmen aren't of the calibre of Jack Kramer or Ted Schroeder and a large appropriation isn't doled out each year to enable the hiring of a regular top rate tennis coach but they have played their best every match this year and deserve credit for such.

It seems to be contagious among some Toledo sportswriters to write articles with an air of egotism that causes much distaste on this campus. If they aren't attempting to overhear the BG-TU basketball rivalry, they are up to something else. This attitude reflects an air of athletic superiority that certainly hasn't been evident to us, especially since this is the first year since 1948 that the Rockets have been able to outdo the Falcons in the field of sports.

Snake In Housemother's Brazilian Curio Collection

By PAT MATTACHIONE

"Souvenir?" asked the native Brazilian.
"Yes," answered Dr. Porter Crawford.
"Souvenir?" queried an Indian resident of Manaus.
"Yes," replied the energetic Dr. Crawford.
Thus was born the collection of Brazilian curios, now in the possession of Mrs. Ruth Crawford, Beta Sigma housemother.

One of the more interesting rarities in her "museum" is the hide of a 21 foot boa constrictor. The monster when alive had a girth of about two feet. Nice to cuddle up with, huh?

Few individuals ever have in their possession all the trappings of an Indian chief. However, Mrs. Crawford has them in her collection; loin cloth, head dress, necklaces, leg straps and all.

From her assortment of oddities it can be noticed that red, yellow, blue, and a sprinkling of white are the most popular colors. This can be seen in the multitude of Indian hats, pottery, and pictures.

The natives of Brazil believe in realism in their artwork. A doll is so complete in physiology as to have finger nails made of quills. This doll, famous the world over, is called the Bahiana after the residents of Bahia where they are made.

Resembling the delicacy and intricacy of Swiss lace is the native linen work, labyrinto. This lace is not made by crocheting, but by pulling strings from the material.

In the way of musical instruments Mrs. Crawford has a carraica in her assortment. The carraica is comparable to the flute but resembles the pipes of an organ on a midget size.

The couyas or bowls which Mrs. Crawford has in her "curio shop" are made of the fruit of a tree. Bathing, showering, and eating are a few of its many uses. Gaily colored, they resemble Mexican pottery.

A total of seven years was necessary for the gathering of Mrs. Crawford's collection. During that time the late Dr. Crawford was exterminating yellow fever in Brazil under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation.

From The Docket . . .

Student Court adjourned to the Graphic Arts Bldg. to investigate the charges against Jack Miller Wednesday. He was acquitted of parking in a restricted zone and pleaded not guilty due to the inadequacy of the sign.

Because this sign was placed on a curve and lent itself to be arbitrarily interpreted, the court reversed the guilty decision handed down to Robert Voreck and acquitted him on the same charge as Mr. Miller. The court recommended a change in the sign.

Wayne Garrison pleaded guilty with the request for leniency to the charge of parking in the assigned area behind the Men's Gym. Because he would be late to class if he parked elsewhere, he declared that he knowingly parked in an illegal area. He explained his lateness to the fact he was using his car to transport a class. He was declared guilty but the fine suspended due to these circumstances.

PiKA Pledges Paint BG Sign

"It all started as a pledge duty," said John Harakel and Howie Ehrenman, pledges of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Both pledges were instructed last week to wash the large BOWLING GREEN STATE UNIVERSITY sign behind the Library. As they were about to wash the 3' by 25' wooden sign, they discovered that the gold paint on the letters was wearing off.

With Pres. Frank J. Prout's permission, paint furnished by the University, and labor by the two PiKA pledges, work began Monday on the black sign with gold letters.

John and Howie suggested that spot lights be placed on the sign for identification of the campus at night.

Clothes, Clothes Everywhere But Not The Ones We Want

By IRIS IRWIN

After making three trips to Toledo to look for the "Twelfth Night" costumes which were side-tracked during the train strike, Dr. Elden T. Smith secured the outfits from Ohio Wesleyan University.

Bedecked in gay Elizabethan attire Viola (Jean MacGlathery), shipwrecked with her twin brother, Sebastian (Bob Taylor), whom she thinks was drowned, dons masculine clothing and goes into the employ of the Duke Orsino (Alan Nichols), as his "gentleman."

She plans to lose her sorrow over her brother's death in adventure and assumes the name of Cesario. Sebastian, also believing his sister dead, is saved by Antonio (Hal Kominsky), a sea captain who is out of favor with the Duke.

The second section of the plot is unveiled with a glimpse into the residence of the Duke who is suffering from lover's melancholy though he is actually more in love with love than with Olivia, the countess. Olivia (June McGuigan) is also in sorrow over the loss of a brother, presenting the third thread in the plot.

Malvolio (Don Miller), a steward to the Countess, is made the object of a playful trick plotted

Card Game Cycle Found On Campus

Everything in the world today, it is said, goes in cycles and card games are no exception.

This card game cycle is especially evident at Bowling Green. At the first of the year everyone was playing bridge, then around Thanksgiving the canasta craze started. Those who hadn't learned the techniques of "freezing the pile" or of getting all four red threes here at school picked up the "art" during Christmas vacation.

After Christmas many tests were discussed and gripes aired across a card table while the important question of "should I discard a 4 or an ace?" was mentally debated.

Now it seems that the cycle has progressed to pinocle. To the novice this brings the problems of counting melt and naming trump.

The educated card sharks, of course, are adept at all the forementioned games, but those of us who "just play" struggle along from one game to the next as they come.

Read It And Weep . . .

by BILL DAY

Besides receiving the expected education in one of my classes this year, I have also been getting an education on how to select a suitable mate to be my companion in the future years. I really didn't expect this to happen in a history class but it is happening and it isn't costing a cent or is there need for a term paper on the subject. The only thing is that it does require some extra homework.

According to this sagacious professor, the selection of a mate is one of the most dangerous jobs that any man can undertake. If the wrong decision is made, a man can end up being bored the rest of his life. One way to lessen the possibility of error in this matter is to have an education because education teaches a person to be selective and discriminate which is all important in choosing a companion. The selection of a mate, according to this man, is definitely not a democratic process but rather it is aristocratic because it is a well known fact that everyone is not equal in this situation.

The above points are well-founded and should be taken quite seriously by the innocent male who is about to make one of the most critical steps that he will ever take in his life. Nothing is so much of a gamble as the actual giving away of all freedom by a man so that he may live in companionship with one of the opposite sex. War is nothing compared to this and rolling over Niagara Falls in a barrel is safe in comparison. Because a man has so much to give up for the sake of a social custom and a wedding band it is necessary that some other examples are pointed out.

If a man wishes to look into the future and see what his partner will look like in 10 or 20 years, he should be certain that he attends one of his mate's family reunions. Here is where he can see in plain sight just what the size and shape and the intelligence of the rest of the family is into which he may be dragged. Here is the place to discover if any untruths have been told about rich uncles or educated cousins or beautiful aunts. Here is the best place possible to get a look at the entire picture of the other's family. Here is where the final decision should be made.

It is wise to remember that a careful selection of a mate will either make or break a good man. It is necessary that he take everything into careful consideration before the final decision is reached. The future of every male depends much upon the serious consideration of this matter before any definite action is decided upon.

and Silla," one of many stories on the mix up of twins available at that time. Tone of the play is musical-melancholy.

The clown, Feste, is an important element in the production in that he connects the three portions of the plot and since he is also the direct cause of the downfall of Malvolio.

Further competent acting on the part of the supporting cast makes this play the successful production it should be. It is the most popular and most acted of Shakespeare's plays.

Who Asked You?

By DOC CRANSTON

In keeping with the current situation, our question for this week is, "What is your impression of the present railroad strike?"

Kip Cranston, a sophomore from Wakeman, answered by saying, "It seems to me that they are trying to create jobs for which there is no need. However, I would like to see how the miners are reacting to the situation; a few months back, they had no qualms about fouling up our national comfort in general."

Barb Ward

Don Miller

Barb Ward, a senior from Cleveland, answered, "I was planning on going home; it's hard enough getting there without a strike, but now I don't know. It seems to me that if they had to strike, they should have given a much better reason than they did." Clayton Titus, a sophomore from Johnson City, N. Y., said, "I believe that in rare cases there could be reason for an extra man in the cab of a Diesel, but in general I would say that someone is trying to make jobs for all concerned. The only way the strike effects me personally is that I find I am not receiving the mail I used to."

Clayton Titus

Kip Cranston

"We can't get our costumes for 'Twelfth Night'," said Don Miller, a sophomore from Roselle, Ill. "Not only that, but as a result, I'm getting no mail; as a result, I'm getting no money; the end result of which is that I don't know how much longer I'm going to be able to eat. Everyone knows that there is no coal-car on a Diesel."

Bowling Green Host To District High School Meets

NWO Scholastic Track, Net Squads Battle For Honors

By ED JENNINGS

The Twenty-Fifth Annual Northwestern Ohio High School Track and Field Meet will be held here Friday and Saturday. Anywhere from 550 to 600 athletes will represent approximately 57 teams making up both Class A and B entries. Bowling Green will be host to the Western Division while Mansfield will have the Eastern Division.

Toledo Libbey and Oak Harbor shared the limelight here last year by emerging champions in "A" and "B" respectively. Both are given better than even chances of repeating their feat of a year ago.

Students will be admitted free to the preliminaries Friday but a slight charge will be made Saturday for the finals.

Judges for the meet will be R. H. Whittaker, head field judge for Class A; C. R. Cook, Bowling Green, head field judge for Class B. Bill Roemer will act as clerk of course for Class A. Vern Dunham will be clerk of course for the Class B.

Sam Monetta is official starter and head referee for the meet. Chief timer will be Dean Ralph G. Harshman and chief final judge, Alva Bachman.

Falcons Show At Jacket Relays

By HANK BUSSEY

When the Baldwin-Wallace Relays are over and the cups awarded tomorrow evening at the Berea cinder oval, Bowling Green will again be in the money—but for only place or show.

According to Dave Matthews, BG professor of trackology, results will probably be like a movie re-release, strikingly familiar and similar to last year's showing.

Netters Wind Up Home Schedule With Pair Of Foes

It's Detroit tomorrow and Youngstown Monday for Coach Vernon Lerch's tennis squad as they wind up their home state and plunge into the home stretch of this year's schedule.

BG will try to take the measure of the strong Detroit netters and avenge a 1949 loss at the hands of the Michiganders tomorrow at 10 a.m. on the home courts. Detroit trounced Michigan Normal this year while BG fell victims to the same squad by a 8-1 score earlier this season.

Youngstown will field a mystery squad as far as BG knows. This match will get underway Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

It was another defeat at the hands of Toledo Tuesday for the BG netters but this one had a little more sunshine in it. Bill Pickett teamed up with Weldon Smith to mark up a decisive win over the ace Toledo two-some. They took the match by lop sided scores of 6-2 and 6-0.

The rest of the squad didn't fare so well as Toledo swept the remaining matches for a 8-1 win. In the singles Pickett succumbed 6-1, 6-1, Smith took it on the chin 6-2, 6-1, then John Barr fell by an identical score, 6-2, 6-1.

Dick Cook battled his opponent for two hours and 45 minutes before bowing, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5. Jack List and John Burbridge also fell to the wayside, 6-0, 6-2, and 6-2, 6-0, respectively.

Except for the Pickett-Smith battle BG fared no better in the doubles. Miller and Barr were turned back 6-1, 6-1, while Burbridge and Cook trailed 6-0, 6-2.

Undeclared against Ohio competition, and showing an overall season mark of six wins and two losses, Bowling Green's baseball Falcons are in Cleveland today for a game with Fenn College, then move down to Kent tomorrow for a contest with the Golden Flashes.

Karl Tabar, ace Fenn hurler, will probably be on the hill for the Foxes today, and that means trouble for the Bee Gee batsmen. Tabar has pitched well all season, including a 1-0 shutout over Akron's Zippers. He allowed the Rubber City swingers only four hits in that one.

Kent extended their winning streak to eight straight Wednesday.

day with an 11-5 win over Western Reserve. Last weekend they triumphed over Fenn, 3-0, and Mt. Union, 3-2. In the Fenn game, Flash flinger Frank Belgan doled out just two hits and stretched his scoreless inning skein to 18.

The Flashes now have an 8-3 record, including a 13-4 slaughter at the expense of Baldwin-Wallace.

Tuesday, the Falcons lost their second game to Michigan Normal when the Hurons tied up the contest at two apiece in the ninth, then scored again in the twelfth frame to win, 3-2.

Paul Wilder doubled in Art Harper from first with two out for the winning marker. Normal tied things up in the ninth on another double, this one by Ted Bott, after Gula's error put Frank Velshinski on base.

Bowling Green scored in the third inning on a walk, an error, and singles by Ralph Prohaska and Don Vorwerck. Lou Cross, the third BG pitcher, was charged with the loss.

Falcon Linksmen Seek To Avenge Only Golf Defeat

Michigan Normal will furnish the opposition tomorrow when they bring Earl Burt and staff here for a scheduled match on the Country Club course.

Burt, now a senior at the Michigan school, has caused Falcon golfers much grief in the four years they have met him. Only once was he defeated by the locals.

Normal fills out their well rounded squad with Jerry Brown, who was defeated by Jack Chapman in the last match; Norm Tanbar, a transfer from Purdue; and Bob Borsuck.

Toledo met the Falcons on the home course yesterday with Bowling Green putting a 5-1-1 record on the block.

Bowling Green managed to gain 10th place honors in the recent Ohio Collegiate Golf Tourney at Columbus. Ohio State, the host team, carried off the honors with Ohio University following.

Individual 36 hole scores for the Bee Gee men were: Hooper Jones—164, Jack Chapman—165, Maurice Becker—174, Hugh Skelley—176, and Dick Zbornik—181.

Chick Hendrickson, Ohio State, and Roger Pedigo, Ohio University, were the individual winners with 145 each. Ohio State easily won the team title.

Findlay College was decided by the local golfers here Tuesday 12-0 for the fifth victory of the current campaign. Hoop Joones took medalist honors with a one under par 69 while Chapman scored 71.

Apparel Publicized

The Bee Gee fad of wearing neck scarves was publicized in the May issue of Practical Home Economics magazine. Bobbie Whitelaw, Bee Gee's representative on the National Youth Panel, submitted the style information. She is a junior clothing and textile major in home economics.

Falcon Sail Club At OSU Regatta

Bill Critzer, Bill Alexander, Barney McArdler, and Jerry Bresahan will represent the BGSU Sailing Club in the district eliminations tomorrow at Ohio State. Critzer and McArdler will race in the A division while Alexander and Bresahan compete in the B division.
